THE longest Pontificate has come to a close. Prus IX. has gone to join his two hundred and fifty-five predecessors. His reign lasted nearly thirty-two years, and during that period he witnessed more changes, experienced more vicissitudes of fortune, probably, than any previous occupant of the chair of Sr. PETER. Called to succeed GREGORY XIV. in June, 1846, GIOVANNI MARIA MASTAI FER-BETTI commenced his reign with an apparent determination to reform the Papal Government, and at once attained popularity by his liberality and benevolence. But the system of which he then became the embodied impersonation was too strong for him, and his good intentions vanished beneath the rising tide of Italian freedom. Aspirations for liberty of action and representative institutions awoke in the breasts of Italian patriots such as the Papacy could not concede, Minister Count Rossi was assassinated, while found to be in good working order. The attack of GARLBALD'S enthusiastic red shirts in October, 1866, upon the City it is true, but the hour for consummating the work of CAVOUR and VICTOR EMMANUEL arrived in September, 1870, when the troops of the Italian King entered Rome, and it became the capital of free Italy, while the The Chronicle and Directory is the only temporal power of the Pontiff ceased to be-

EMMANUEL took the tide at its flood. Thus in Pro Nono's eventful reign fell the temporal power of the Popes. The sevenhilledcity, always glorious through its memorable history and its marvellous associations, became once more the metropolis of a great and free country. When the sun of Imperial Rome, the mistress of the world, sank amid clouds of blood and ruins beneath the ruthless hand of the barbarian Hum-and Goth, then arose, like a phoenix from its ashes, Pontifical Rome, destined to sway the nations of Christendom, not by the sword but by HANKOW and Mesers. Even then the giant died hard. and its immense vitality is proved by the fact that until 1870 the Roman Pontiff still ranked among the sovereigns of Europe. Peradventure he may in that vast and splendid solitude, during the years in which he has immured himself from the public gaze, have more than once called to remembrance those words of the meek and lowly Jzgus whose vicegenent on parth. claimed to be "My Kingdom is not this world." At all events, it is pleasing to reflect that one of the last acts! the aged Pontiff was one of forgivenoss: he blessed his conqueror Victor Ex-MANUEL when the latter was lying on his death-bed. The shadow of death was even then hovering over Prus IX., and, though pover unforgiving or implacable, he doubt still found it difficult to pardon the despoiler of historritory. To err is human, to forgive divine, and if man can feel this sentiment to be true he must do so most keen! when he is nearing the border hand and the world is receding from his view.

Newman would have accepted his advice and Whitehead would have escaped the dilemma of being accused or accuser. Charles Newman, I have, I believe, said all I ought to say in my charge to the jury in your favour, it is possible that I may have suggested a defence for you in excess of my duty. All must recognise a tendency to wrong as common to poor human nature, and all must pity you whilst concurring in the justice of the sentence. You have had the benefit of an able defence. That you were not convicted of a crime more heinous than that of which you have been convicted is owing greatly to the skill with which the evidence in your favour was elicited by your counsel. When called on to say what could be said for you be wisely confined his appeal for a mitigation of your sentence to three words, "Newman was drank." In its pithy shortness lay its eloquence. Siving you all the advantage I can of the only mitigating circumstance I incline to think that your violence indicated a ferocious nature. The TUTLER, PALMER & Co.'s public peace must be preserved by punishing those who break it. The sentence of the Court on you is that you be imprisoned for three calcudar months. I trust that you will, whilst in prison, see how disgracefully you have acted and on your returning to society I hope it willbe with a firm resolve to live a quiet and peace able and sober life.

The prisoner was then removed. BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SNOWDEN.

REJEIVING STOLER GOODS. Lee Avane, convicted of resolving a quantity of bean curd proved to have been piratically taken from a boat entoring the harbour, was sentenced to one year's hard labour. CAP LIBTING Cha Aliop, convicted of stealing a cap and against whom there were previous convictions, was sentenced to six months' hard labour. THE SHANGHAI STABBING CASE

Edward Sunstein, convicted of inflicting grievons bodily harm upon a shipmate named Willes, at Shanghai, was brought up. His Lordship said that if the information had been hid for an attempt to murder it was possible the jury might have found the prisoner guilty. He never heard of a case in which a more desperate attempt was made to injure a man for so alight a provocation. Willes refused the prisoner a little hair oil in the morning, and in the evening the prisoner attempted to cut Willes's throat. The Attorney-General had not pressed the case, but where the knife was used the offence must be severely punished The sentence of the court was that the prisoner be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for eighteen calendar months.
